A Meaningful Concert for the Montreal Holocaust Museum
Wednesday, May 3, 2017

Montréal – Tuesday, April 4, 2017 – As part of its annual donor recognition event on Wednesday, May 3, 2017, the Montreal Holocaust Museum will host the Malek Jandali trio in concert. Jandali, an American composer and pianist of Syrian origin, is known for his dedication to children locally and internationally, namely through his foundation, Pianos for Peace. Thanks to the support of a major donor, Roslyn Margles, the Museum has been able to make this event open to the general public.

education.

As Montrealers grow more concerned about the Syrian conflict and the people who are forced to flee, this concert will be an opportunity to discover the ancient melodies of Aleppo and the Silk Road. These works preserve and present the rich cultural and musical heritage of Syria and Levant, at a time when it is being eradicated before our eyes. Meaningful and timely collaborations such as those with the Montreal Holocaust Museum support Malek Jandali's ongoing efforts to achieve peace and promote philanthropy through art, music and Music is a universal means of communication, and this event will help strengthen links between communities and build awareness about the prevention of prejudice and racism. At the same time as the Montreal Holocaust Museum transmits the memory of the genocide of Jews during the Second World War we must reflect on the consequences of conflicts and crimes against humanity today.
