

UNITED AGAINST GENOCIDE

Understand, question, prevent

Developed by the Montreal Holocaust Museum in partnership with the Armenian, Cambodian, Jewish and Rwandan communities of Montreal, the exhibition United Against Genocide: Understand, question, prevent explores the issue of genocide and its past and current manifestations.

The traveling exhibition has been adapted from its virtual version, and allows visitors to question the process of genocide, to identify the causes and prevent them.

This exhibition presents rare historical documents, archival photos and survivor testimony. As part of an interdisciplinary project and theme, the exhibition is divided into six sections.

It identifies the stages that lead to genocide and highlights the crucial role of survivors in remembrance and the fight for justice. The exhibition allows visitors to understand the role of media before, during and after genocide, and the different ways through which resistance manifests itself during genocide. Visitors are also invited to explore four current situations where genocide is likely to occur.
